CDC Drops a Bombshell on Itself, Exposes Alarming Risk/Benefit Analysis

If there was any doubt about an intent to harm, there is no doubt anymore.

Recently (Sept 12), the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) issued new recommendations, advising "updated" COVID-19 vaccines for everyone aged six months and older.

This announcement raised alarm bells, as the CDC's guidance starkly contrasts with other countries like the UK, where Autumn booster vaccinations are recommended for those over 65 years old — a 64.5-year difference.

People aged 65 and over will be able to book their autumn COVID booster through the national booking system from today, meaning five million more people can now top up their protection ahead of winter.

The NHS Covid vaccine service is also now offering appointments to carers and pregnant women, with bookings able to be made online or over the phone.

People aged 75 and over, the severely immunosuppressed, and frontline health and care workers have been able to book their latest booster dose since last Wednesday – with appointments starting from today.

So, what gives? Why is the CDC recommending new booster shots for babies when other countries are advising them for [severe cases only]?

Well, it seems the "experts" at the CDC are unable/unwilling to do basic math.

According to the CDC's own website, a million vaccine doses would prevent between 19 to 95 hospitalizations, 5 to 19 ICU admissions, and possibly one death for 12 to 17-year-olds.

Estimated COVID-19 hospitalizations prevented vs. potential myocarditis cases for every million mRNA COVID-19 vaccine doses: 12 – 17-year-olds†
Per million doses in 12 – 17-year-olds over 6 months*
19 – 95 hospitalizations prevented
5 - 19 ICU admissions prevented
0 – 1 death prevented

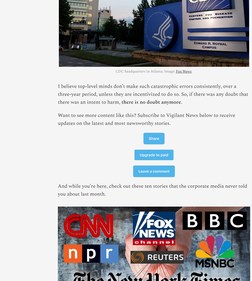
The recommendation becomes more baffling for 5 to 11-year-olds, where an estimated 16 to 76 hospitalizations would be prevented for every million doses given.



Estimated COVID-19 hospitalizations prevented over 6 months for every million mRNA COVID-19 doses, among those age <50 years, by age group
Based on hospitalization rates from Spring 2022 (low), December 2021 (high winter), Summer 2022 (high case) years

18 – 49 years

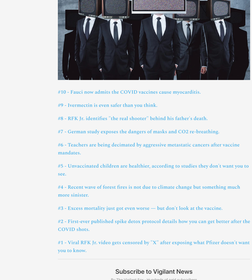
Even for 18 to 49-year-olds, a million doses would only prevent an estimated 75 hospitalizations based on Spring data.

But how many serious adverse events are we causing per million doses?

The numbers are horrifying. Dr. John Campbell took the CDC's estimations for hospitalizations and ICU visits presented by the COVID shots, and compared them to the serious adverse event rate per one million doses, based on Dr. Joseph Fraiman and colleagues' re-analysis of the Pfizer and Moderna clinical trials.

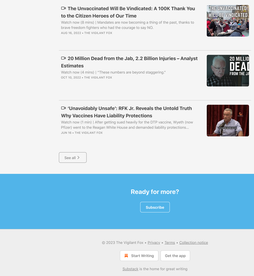
This is what he found:



For every million doses administered, Pfizer's data revealed an additional 1,000 incidents of serious adverse events of special interest compared to the placebo group.

(Higher than placebo baseline)
10.1 per 10,000
101 per 100,000
1,010 per 1,000,000
Moderna vaccines excess risk of serious adverse

The situation appears even more concerning with Moderna; their data indicated that every million doses resulted in 1,500 additional serious adverse events of special interest.



So, the CDC is recommending a shot that causes 1,000 serious adverse events or more per million doses to save maybe one life (12-17 age group).

"Now, if that mathematics makes any sense to you, do let me know because I just don't know where the thinking is coming from here," remarked Dr. Campbell. "The main point in medicine is about the individual. It's the balance of risks for the individual. And this data to me indicates that it's not there."

The CDC is one of the most prominent health agencies in the world.

How can an agency of such caliber advocate for a vaccine regimen that, in the 12-17 age group, may result in 1,000 serious adverse events or more for the prevention of merely 19 to 95 hospitalizations?

I believe top-level minds don't make such catastrophic errors consistently, over a three-year period, unless they are incentivized to do so. So, if there was any doubt that there was an intent to harm, there is no doubt anymore.

Is it worth pointing out all the recent data and studies that prove the vaccines actually INCREASE the risks of infection, hospitalization and death.
Don't get me wrong...this is a great, concise article. But it always annoys me when we use the CDC's own numbers to prove their point. Because they still look bad. The reality is much worse than this... because the truth is that the mRNA shots are NEGATIVELY effective, and then we all of the side effects. It's all negatives... no positives, no matter the age group.
